Ringed Noises.

At times, sometimes a roaring, buzzing sound, are caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also result from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for this disease, which it cures by purifying the blood.

Hood's Pills are the best after-dinner pills, assist digestion, prevent constipation.

A Grand Success.

Our readers will hail with pleasure the information just received that the management of the Lexington Exposition has concluded to continue it till January 19.

Thousands of its visitors from this and other States are enthusiastic in its praise. It is indeed a great educator. Its music hall has been the scene of illustrations of scientific experiments, lectures, concerts and meetings of masonic, odd fellows and other fraternal organizations. Its art gallery, historical hall, midway pleasure, wondrous show, Japanese bazaar, machinery hall, etc., with the special attraction of lectures, band concerts, etc., to be given daily is well worth the endeavor of our citizens to spend the day at this successful exposition. Railroad fare one-half rate.

Mr. George A. Whitney retired from the office of County Clerk last Monday, having served the people to the entire satisfaction of all concerned for a period of four years. His records have been subjected to the scrutiny of the proper authorities and found correct in every particular. Mr. Whitney has been pains-taking and accommodating and no man, be he ever so bad to please, can say of a truth he has not been properly waited on. We congratulate the county for having had such an obliging, faithful and efficient officer, and only hope the present incumbent will be able to rank with him. Mr. Whitney should have the sincere thanks of the patrons of his office and the best wishes of all good people for his future. He does not say what his future avocation will be, but we venture the prediction that he will not have an idle moment, and he will have tendered him something much better than the office of County Clerk.

The Ohio river and its tributaries are rising rapidly, and as the general rains continue fears are entertained that there may be a flood. Several towns in West Virginia, along the headwaters of the Monongahela river, are already inundated. The rise everywhere is rapid. From both Cincinnati and Louisville the reports are that a marked and rapid rise is being experienced at those points on the Ohio. At the latter place the ice had formed a gorge so as to stop the running of the ferry-boats.

A Card of Thanks.

I desire to extend my sincere thanks to our friends for the many kindnesses shown to me and mine in the sad affliction that has over taken us.

Gratefully,
Mrs. A. W. McClure.

Week of Prayer.

Monday night at the First Presbyterian church, subject, Humiliation and Thanksgiving; Rev. Everett Gill. Tuesday night at the Methodist church, subject, The Church Universal; Elder W. T. Tibbs. Wednesday night at the Christian church, subject, Nations and Their Rulers; Rev. A. J. Arrick. Thursday night at the Southern Presbyterian church, subject, Foreign Missions; C. J. Nugent. Friday night at the Baptist church, subject, Home Missions. So services Saturday night.

The Harold Hotel will be open for the reception of guests to-day. The Harold is a new four story stone front building, located opposite the Court-house, with everything new; furniture, carpets and all things. Every room is lighted by electricity and heated by steam. Mr. F. B. Fiesinger is the manager, and he comes highly recommended as a hotel man. With the National and the Harold, Mt. Sterling can boast of having two fine hotels as any other city of the same size in the State.

County Attorney Wallace DeHaven having performed the duties of the office of County Attorney rightly turned over to his successor, Mr. A. A. Hazlett, Monday. "Old Shy" has made an official of whom the people should be proud. Let no guilty man escape has been his motto, and he has been just as watchful for his county's interests. Mr. DeHaven will practice his profession.

Mrs. Lizzie Estep, daughter of N. S. Staton, died at the home of her father on Queen street Monday, of consumption. Funeral will be preached this afternoon at the residence by Rev. A. J. Arrick. Mrs. Estep leaves a husband and two children. She was a member of the Baptist church. Burial at Machpelah cemetery.

Mr. C. A. Harris, Local Editor of the ADVOCATE, who is in poor health, left for Aiken, South Carolina, Monday. Let us hope, and we believe, that his health will soon be permanently restored and that he will return in a few weeks and resume his work on this paper. The best wishes of many anxious friends follow him.

The prospect of an early resumption of peaceable relations between China and Japan are not flattering. The special envoy sent to Japan had a farewell talk with the Mikado, and the latter refused to call off his dogs of war until Peking was occupied by Japanese troops. Minister Denby believes the negotiations will prove fruitless.

Mr. Buford A. Tracy has succeeded his father as agent for the Ninth Street Tobacco Warehouse, Louisville. We have had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Tracy and we trust his father's friends will stand by him in his new business. He was in the city Monday.

Superintendent of Schools L. N. Horton has moved his office to the front up stairs room over the Exchange Bank. Mr. Horton has been advised by the State Superintendent that he will be able to forward him for distribution January 12, only one-half of the amount due teachers on that date.

Dr. W. S. Fulton, of Lexington, is expected here next week to assist Rev. A. J. Arrick in a meeting at the Southern Presbyterian Church during the week. Mr. Fulton is a strong and interesting preacher and will receive a hearty welcome by all christian people.

The Kentucky Baptist was sold at auction last Saturday to satisfy demands of creditors. It will probably resume its issue as a dollar paper. It was bid in for $10 by Mr. J. S. Long, subject to a mortgage of $200.

Ex-Sheriff John C. Richardson has moved his office over J. B. White's Grocery store, where he will be glad to see all who are owing taxes. A cordial welcome awaits all friends who may call on him.

Death of Rev. John B. DeVault.

"Among the young ministers of our acquaintance none have impressed us more favorably or won our esteem more highly than Rev. John Baker DeVault. He was a gentle, pure, noble, christian man."

He was born in Leesburg, Tenn. July 26, 1858, studied at King College (that mother of ministers) and at Union Seminary in Virginia. He was licensed by Holston Presbytery in 1884, and was immediately called on for work in some of the most difficult responsible portions of the Synod of Kentucky. He labored at Irvine, in the mountains; then took charge of the Salem and Mount Tabor churches, and then of the churches at Clatsville and Hopewell. Some time ago, feeling the approach of death, he undertook a church in the midland of Florida, at Maitland. But consumption claimed him, and he died at his father's home at Leesburg, Tenn., on Saturday, December 29. Thus ends a brief but useful life.—Christian Observer.

Rev. DeVault was known by many of our citizens, and was a bright young man, a christian, and his loss in the early morning of his life, causes a pang of sorrow in the hearts of those who knew and appreciated him for his worth. He was a brother-in-law of Dr. E. O. Guarrant.

Died, last Saturday morning at the Palace Hotel, Louisville, Mr. Andrew McClure, aged thirty years, after three hours of suffering with epilepsy. Mr. McClure was an excellent man with many warm friends and being in the purchase and sale of tobacco at the time he was taken sick was in Louisville on the market. Just before retiring he informed the clerk at the hotel that he was subject to spells, and saying that he felt badly asked that his room be watched. At one o'clock a noise was heard from his room and entering it was discovered that he was in convulsions. A doctor was called who worked with him until three o'clock when he died. A coroner's jury was summoned and a verdict was rendered in effect that his death was produced by an attack of epilepsy. The news here was a severe blow to his family and friends. His body was brought to this place Saturday morning. Funeral was preached at his late residence Monday morning at eleven o'clock by Rev. W. E. Keller assisted by Rev. C. J. Nugent, and his body was buried in Machpelah cemetery. He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn his loss.

His life was insured for $23,000 in the following companies: Mutual Benefit, $7,000; C. C. Graves, agent, $5,000; Massachusetts Mutual, W. T. Saunders, agent, $5,000; New York Life, A. Hoffman, agent, $5,000; Mutual Life, of New York, L. Knox, agent, $5,000, and Equitable Life, of New York, F. R. Logan, agent, $3,000, which amounts will be paid upon the filing of proof.

The universal opinion of Mr. McClure is that he was an honest and affable gentleman.

We are a few hours late to-day, because our electric light would not light last night. Mr. Hudson, the capable Superintendent, was forced to neglect us because he was compelled to take Mr. Helwig's place at the engine. Mr. Hudson would have gladly rendered us the service we needed had it been possible. We were patient with him, and we are sure our subscribers will bear with us also, after this explanation.

Mr. J. Hull Davidson, ex-City Collector of Lexington, and Mrs. H. P. Welsh, wife of the late Deputy Collector, have engaged expert accountants to examine the report of the experts, engaged by the City Council, who found a shortage of $15,000. Mr. Davidson says there is nothing wrong, beyond a looseness in the method of keeping the Collector's books. If this surmise proves to be correct he will sue the city for libel.

Nelson Whitaker, a rich iron manufacturer, is out as a candidate against Elkins for United States Senator from West Virginia. Bidding will be lively.

Wants Water Works and Additional City Lighting.

EDITOR ADVOCATE:—At a meeting of the City Council Friday night, January 4, held for the purpose of receiving bids for lighting the streets with electricity. The contract with franchise was awarded to Hon. John P. Martin, of Xenia, Ohio, by a majority vote of the Council, provided, however, that Mr. Martin procure the franchise for water-works, which has previously been granted the Mt. Sterling Water Works Company within the 60 days and complete same by August 12, 1895. Mr. Martin comes well indorsed, and showed conclusively that he meant business by filing a bond to the city in the penal sum of $5,000, signed by local parties who are well known to the citizens to be good financially.

Mr. Martin, we understand, has an option on the Howard's Mill property and if he succeeds in obtaining the franchises for Electric Light and Water Works we will soon have both.

While it is true that the new contract for street lighting will cost the city $1,300 more than the present one, there is to be ten additional lights which are badly needed, as a great many citizens will testify to, especially those in the dark districts of the city.

By increasing our expenditure $1,300 more than has already been contracted for, we have an opportunity of getting two very much needed improvements. The citizens, so far as we have been able to ascertain, favor the action of the Council.

Friday evening of last week Mr. John P. Martin, of Xenia, Ohio, was before the City Council, asking for a twenty-year franchise and a contract for lighting the city for the same length of time. There were three bids in, but only one was accompanied by a bond declared by the notice published by order of the Council, hence only one was considered. The present company furnishes the arc-light for $85 per light and Mr. Martin's bid was $100. The contract would have been closed with Mr. Martin immediately had he been in position to close with the Mt. Sterling Water Company, so that both plants could have been constructed at the same time, but in order that time or given him to arrange for the putting in of both plants the contract for street lighting was awarded him provided, he arrange with the Mt. Sterling Water-works Co. for putting in the water plant. The Electric Lighting contract becoming void in the event of his failure to arrange for both.

Jim Best, you are out of office now old fell-er. No more keys have you to turn on the unfortunate law-abiding. You have done your best, no doubt, to please those within the walls and those on the outside. You have not been charged with dishonesty, nor do we believe you would connive to the interest of any man or set of men. Unfortunately one of your prisoners was taken from you and ruthlessly hanged. Had this lamentable affair never happened, you would never have had anything during your official period to have regretted. You are conscious of having done what you could in protection of those under your charge, and those who know you best are satisfied that you have been an official faithful and true. Mr. J. W. Cheneault is now carrying the keys to the jail and will doubtless make an acceptable officer.

John C. Richardson has made a good Sheriff, as the statement of the Commissioners published in this issue of the ADVOCATE demonstrates. His accounts balance to the penny and his duty as Sheriff of Montgomery county have been correctly performed. Who can say he has not been faithful and correct? No man can apply to his official acts adverse criticism. Well-done faithful servant is the universal plaudit. Mr. William Siedel and deputies have succeeded Mr. Richardson and we are satisfied they will make as efficient officers as the retiring ones.

Mr. John T. Shelby, law partner of W. C. P. Breckinridge, Thursday afternoon broke a cane over the head of Editor C. C. Moore, of the Bluegrass Blade, in Mr. Moore's office, and then snatched out a handful of the editor's whiskers. Mr. Shelby objected to a paragraph in the Blade, stating that Miss Pollard knew more than all of Breckinridge's lawyers combined, and she had not lied as all of them had.

Dan McClure, an old colored man whose home is on the Spencer pike, has been missing since Monday, noon, of last week. The fear of his friends is that he has wandered away and perished with cold.

CHENEY, CLAY & CHENEULT.

The new Court of Appeals was organized yesterday.

morning we invariably awoke with mornings he invariably awoke with a terrible thirst, which Poppendyke assuaged with all the resources of border art.

Royston said I was prejudiced; that nobody ever died in town; that people sometimes evaporated, blew away or were mysteriously withered up and wafted into Muscat county, but that a natural death had never occurred in the history of the place.

I grew to admire the cheerful, jaunty fellow making a newspaper out in this lonely corner of creation, which a passing English lord, on his way to Chihuahua to look after his cattle ranch, had informed me in extremely low tones was "the domdest slice of inferno outside of Hindia" he had seen. Roylston published this paper on Saturdays, when the office would be filled with subscribers watching the peon turn the crank of the press, and as fast as the sheets were off seize on the paper and comment profanely on each and every item.

His Royston swung a free pen, and His Dudley Nibs let out severely at times in his comments on men and things. Of a happening at Jake Thoms' place, he wrote one day: "The representative of the town, Jacob Thoms, Esq., may be a good enough representative of southern chivalry, but he should not pluck mere kids. Rather, for the good name of the town, he should confine his efforts to relieving wandering 'me luds' and the discomfort of their superfluous cash. He should pluck the line of the town in anger, for we love 'our Jake' as well as our own ribs, and, taking the liberty of an old friend, make this suggestion to guide him in the future."

I recall that Jake was standing in the crowd and the little ones, from voice on in the crowd, in a falsetto aid sharply: "Well, Jake, this is serious. You've got to take it up with His Duddy Nibs."

Jacob Thoms, Esq., stroked his long sandy mustache and replied: "Well, now, I don't think the editor has gone too far. We've got to have somebody remind us now and then that the town's name must be kept up, like as if it was Filadelfy itself. The langwidge suits me down to the ground, and the paper says, 'We pen these lines more in sorrow than in anger.' (That's what I mean.)"

There was no further complaint. Once Royleston "called down" old oppendyke himself in these terms. Although our town may not yet boast a first class hotel, such as we hope to secure some day, still it is incumbent on the proprietor of the only place of public entertainment to have to preserve order and prevent bullies of the sort our Mexican friends call "thros" for a quarrel. On Tuesday there was row at Poppen's, during breakfast. An eastern man, forgetting where he was, commented sharply, perhaps rightly, on the age of the eggs in his omelet. A ready and star boarder took it on himself to tell the eastern gentleman if he did not like the eggs there were no fresher to be had, and what the stranger continued, in a calm tone, to damn the eggs, when the permanent guest threw a pepper-pellet at his face and Ponnendyke estimated that better men than the stranger had gone east in a box because the fare did not suit them.

The row ended with an apology from the stranger, who remarked that he was bilious that morning, that he had forgotten he was not in his own house, and that if the citizens liked stale eggs he would make no further complaint, as, if his name was John Jay Hancock, he did not feel any better than the rest of man-

And. What's object to it that Poppendyke should not have himself apologized for the eggs. If we are to keep up the good name of our town, we must see to it that our omelets be artistically composed and the material is fresh and sweet. Poppendyke, like Homer, sometimes nods; but, on the whole, we are all proud our Peter Poppendyke."

Thus did Royleston pour oil in the flames he opened with his sharp tongue. There was much querying when the Border Scout appeared as to who it was that fellow Homer might be. Poppendyke, who was a Border Scout has lost its editor, and the town mourns. To no one other than the charming and distinguished Senorita Cervantes y de Palencia would this community have surrendered the honored representative of the press who has done so much to elevate the tone of this community. Arthur John Royleston is in luck. He has captured the premio grande in life's lottery. He has beat the record. Even those whom his trenchant pen has scored time and time again can only wish him lifelong happiness, and who could grudge felicity to the fair one who has literally captured our town? We are happy to be able to state that Mr. Royleston has consented to act as our Border correspondent, and that he will interest himself in the project so faithfully and persistently advocated in these columns, the establishment of an electric railway here. We are proud of our town, prouder of the charmer who has stolen our hearts away, and we shall be happy to see you here.

— You may now read this item from the press and reeking with the odor of fresh ink—that good old printer's ink we all love so well—grabbed the new editor from Galveston, hugged him to his breast and exclaimed: "Youngster, you'll do. You've got the style for our town. There'll be no flites on The Border now. There and there has been a change. The town is now a city, and the railway, and it runs through Angel Island, and the favorite car bears

Royston is the president of the company, and it is pleasing to note that the line pays a dividend, part of which Royston spends in Paris.

There was never a truer story than this, as every gentleman in the town whose name I have found it convenient to forget, will affirm. Royston and Mercedes are real people, and who can doubt the evidence of The Border Scout and the rushing down lonely alley of the buzzing electric?

The Turning of the Worm.

There are some excellent people who make it a point to submit to annoyances, but when they finally resist some imposition they sometimes make spirited work of it. A mild-mannered man of this class came ex-

"Why, what's the matter? Don't we treat you well?"
"You treat me all right, but I can't stand that German musician in the next room."
"Why, he plays the clarinet very well, they say."
"Maybe he does. I guess he plays so well. He played so well last night and so much that I couldn't get a wink of sleep until after 1 o'clock when I dropped off from sheer weariness."

Deschampselles, the greatest whist player the world has ever seen, had at one hand and was an advanced politician. His manual dexterity is remarkable, and it was very interesting to watch him with his one hand, and his left—collect the cards, and deal them out—and gather them in tricks. Late in life he had developed into ardent republicanism, he was supposed to have been mixed up in some of the attempts at revolution which broke out in the earlier days of the reign of Louis Philippe. His papers were seized, and it was proved that he had drawn up a list of persons to be dis-ed of. Among them was an elderly acquaintance, so described: "Vatry (Alphie) to be guillotined. Reason—citoyen inutile. Vatry is a left wheel player."—San Francisco Chronicle.

LOVE AND HUNGER.

On the earth, that
Bend the sun in course elliptical,
While with all her kindred planets,
Moon and little sister, Venus,
Next to Jerry Mars.

Many smile,
Ere active, and the people
Till they sink into her bosom,
From the rough regions arctic,
To the burning south.

Spirits potent,
Governing with force tyrannic,
Rage, lust, fraud, and ambition,
Hope and fear, despair and malice,
Time and time again.

But among them
There are two whose power is greater, None, or high or low, though they Rich or poor, or wise or foolish—
All, they sway them all.

One is hunger,
Pale and gaunt and much deformed,
While we must do him service,
Else he works us cruel mischief,
And at length he kills.

Love the other,
Beautiful and full of promise,
Hope and joy are his attendants,
Yet when scorned and neglected,
He brings evil too.

Love and hunger!
These are our life's mightiest rulers,
Love the soft claim of his province,
Hunger dominates the body,
Both obey the soul.

If their subjects
Should defy, rebel against them,
Like her sister, earth,
Waste would be theirs to win,
Joyless round the sun.

AN INDIAN LEGEND.

A hundred years ago the immense deserts extending from the declivity of the Rocky mountains to Red river were peopled by numerous barbarous tribes, always at war with one another.

The following is a little story related by an old missionary, who passed 30 years in the midst of these Indians of the northwest:

One day toward the end of the month of July, the chief of the Black-feet went to war with the Crow tribe and each was watching to surprise the other, 50 of the latter were scattered over the prairie gathering wild berries. Not suspecting the presence of their enemies in the neighborhood, they had dispersed themselves here and there without any anxiety in the places where they were fastened to trees, and the women, furnished with kettles, hurried with the fruit to the cars as soon as their vessels were filled.

They had been occupied about an hour at this work when suddenly a troop of armed horsemen appeared in the distance. The Blackfeet were not long in ascertaining that they were Blackfeet coming to surprise and massacre them.

There was not a moment to lose.
They left everything on the prairie which would impede their flight—fruit jars and all were left for the enemy. They thought only of saving their lives.

A young chief of this tribe, who had been married but a few months, had brought his wife with him. At the first cry of alarm he took her in his arms and placed her on horseback behind him.

After going some miles the young chief's horse, tired with the weight of his double burden, fell. His rider at his side. His horse fell to the ground. He realized that the Blackfeet were perceptibly gaining ground on him. He saw that he must fall into their hands if he tried to save his wife. What, then, was he to do?

Should he abandon her on the prairie to become the prey of the enemy?
Should he fall with her rather than basely leave her to her fate?

Meanwhile the Blackfeet were coming.

"I am going to place you on the ground," said he to his wife. "I am aware that you will be a prisoner, but they will not kill you. It would be to disobey with me. You know the sort of death awaiting me if they seize me. Alone with my horse I have a better chance to escape and reach my camp. Once restored to my own people, I will raise a party of warriors, and we will go forth to rescue you from the camp of the Blackfeet. In four or five days you shall be set free."

Saying this, he removed his wife from the horse and put her down on the grass.

The horse, relieved of half his burden, resumed his course more swiftly, and the young Crow found himself beyond the reach of his enemies.
Meanwhile his wife, captured by a Blackfeet, was conducted into the enemy's camp to be given as a present to the chief of the tribe.

Toward 3 o'clock in the afternoon she had escaped from the Blackfeet and arrived in the Crow camp. She related how they had avoided their murderous tomahawk and arrow.

The young chief in particular, who had only desisted from attacking her because he was certain that he would not kill her, and that he could deliver her, endeavored by his recital to gain their sympathy and induce them to join him in wreaking vengeance upon those who had attacked them so treacherously.

Immediately 30 young warriors, who burned with a desire to display their bravery by doing a deed worthy of praise from the old men of the tribe, pressed around him. The warrior, resounding with the cry of vengeance, the avenger went in pairs of the Blackfeet under cover of the night. They encamped on the bars of the Souris river. It was there that they broke the Crow chief and his followers discovered them. At some distance from the camp there was a densely wooded thicket, where 30 men could easily hide themselves.

They directed their course toward this place and there held council.

The chief decided that his companions should wait in the woods while he went to the bank of the river hard by the camp of the Blackfeet, where he hoped in the dim light of the dawn to discover some of the warriors of his wife. On the bank of the river he sat down behind a bush and waited until the women came in the morning with their kettles to draw water.

He hoped to see his wife go down to the river with the others and to have an opportunity to release her and return to his warriors before the day commenced.

He had been in this place for some minutes when he perceived the women going down to the river. Unseen, he followed them until they were about to discover his own. He was beginning to despair, when he saw one coming alone at some distance from the others. This was his wife.

He let her pass and go as far as the river, so as to make certain that he did not deceive himself. As she returned he left his hiding place and stood before her. "Greet the women of your husband," he said. "I have come to see if you are still his wife."

She was surprised at the sight of her husband. He did not give her any time to question him. "Your husband," said he, "has been massacred, so will we leave the prisoner at his post to die of hunger, according to his desire."

There was an old woman in the camp of the Blackfeet that was respected by the others. She had a small ledge all to herself, and when the others stopped at any place she pitched her tent at some distance from the camp. She took pity on the prisoner, and when she saw the small tent of hide and went forth slowly behind the rest. As they did not appear to be hostile, she went to the tent, she retraced her steps. Without being observed by any of her people she cut the bands which bound the prisoner to the post. She also gave her a knife, a little food and a piece of linen to cover her head. So soon as the prisoner saw himself free, he set out, notwithstanding his scolding babe, to regain the dwellings of his people. Weakened by suffering, it took him three days to reach the camp of the Crows, where they were anxiously awaiting the return of the prisoner.

To make a deep impression on his people, he did not enter their camp immediately, but remained at some distance, as if great things were about to happen. He went to the place, he hung himself on the ground, he returned to the sad fate of his warriors, brought about by the infamous treachery of his wife.

At the end of the following day all the men among the Crows capable of fighting were en route to overtake the Blackfeet.

The latter had prudently pitched their camp three days' distance from where they had left their prisoner, so that they were only six days' march that the Crows reached them. They halted at a sufficient distance, not to be discovered by their enemies, and concealed themselves in a large dry ravine.

Crow chief warned his people of the old Indian woman who had taken pity on him. In regard to his wife, they were ordered to take her alive if it were possible.

Before going to the assault one of the chiefs of the expedition desired to visit the camp in order to discover the position of the prisoners.

At 10 o'clock at night, when the fires were burning low and the men had gone into their lodges for the night, he enveloped himself in a blanket and boldly entered the camp of the Blackfeet. He had no difficulty in recognizing the chief's lodge.

It was there that he discovered his wife. He was ordered to take her alive. He soon found also the lodge of the good old woman at the extreme of the camp. She was seated before a little fire, wrapped in a blanket. He approached her and said: "I take pity on you, you who have had commiseration on one of our people. You saved him. Well, I intend likewise to save you. In some minutes all my people will be here to massacre this camp. None can escape, for we are too numerous.
You desire to avoid death, then come, and I will place you in safety.
Come quickly, for my warriors are advancing."

The Crow chief assisted her to carry away her little lodge as far as the ravine.

As soon as she was sheltered from danger the Crow chief gave the signal for the attack. The Blackfeet, buried in sleep, had not time to seize any arms to defend themselves. The Crows, relying upon their numbers, had dispersed themselves in all parts of the camp, so that they fell upon each lodge simultaneously. The combat was short, but the massacre general.
Not one of the Blackfeet saved his life. The woman alone who had betrayed the Crows, fell into their hands alive.

Now it was their turn for vengeance. This was what the chief desired.

"Collect," said he, "all the poles of the lodges to make a wood pile, tie the hands and feet of this traitress to the logs."

The order was carried out. They burned her in the presence of the warriors, reproaching her for the horror of her treachery.—Washington Post.

ly betrayed them. You shall not long enjoy your vengeance. The Great Spirit shall cause to fall on you the punishment of your crime.

The chief of the Blackfeet, not understanding the language of the Crows, asked the woman what his companion should say to her.

"He demands that you cause him to suffer a good deal in order to put his courage to the proof before all your camp, and for that purpose he wishes to pour boiling water over his head."

The Blackfeet was somewhat astonished at such a request.
However, he hastened to carry out this supposed desire of the prisoner, believing that this boasting was done with the design of insulting him, so he took a kettle of boiling water and poured it slowly onto the head of his victim.

"He is satisfied," the prisoner's wife said to the Blackfeet. "Continue to water him. He says that you do him good."

When she thought the scolding which he had received would inevitably cause death, she said to the chief of the Blackfeet:

"Now he desires that you leave him tied to this post to die of hunger."

"As he wishes it," replied the chief,
"We are going to move the camp for fear that your people may come to search for those whom we have massacred, so we will leave the prisoner
at his post to die of hunger, according

ENGLISH HIGH SOCIETY.

Mark Twain Tries His Hand at Solving the Problem of Precedence.

The amusing and puerile problem of precedence in English society is recently hit off by Mark Twain in "The Century Magazine."

Englishmen, says the great humorist, always eat dinner before they go out to dinner, because they know the risks they are running. But nobody ever warns the stranger, so he walks placidly into the trap. Of course no body has hurt this time, because we had all been to dinner, none of us being a novice except Hastings, and he having been informed by the minister, at the time that he invited him, that in deference to the English he had not provided any dinner.

Everybody took a lady and pro-cessioned down to the dining room because it is usual to go through the motions, but there the dispute began.

The Duke of Shoreditch wanted to take precedence and sit at the head of the table, holding that he out-ranked as a minister of state, republi-cally a nation and not a monarch, but I stood for my rights and refused to yield. In the gossip column I ranked all the British royal and said so, and claimed precedence of this one.

It couldn't be settled, of course, because we were all right, and did, he finally, and indignantly, trying to play birth and antiquity and I "seeing" his conqueror and "raising" him with Adam, whose direct posterity I was, as shown by my name, while he was of a collateral branch, as shown by his and by his recent Norman origin, so we all processioned back to the drawing room and had a perpendicular lunch—plate of sardines and a strawberry, and you group yourself and stand up and eat.

The religion of precedence is not so strict as that of the two persons of highest rank chuck up a shilling.
The one that wins has first go at his strawberry, and the loser gets the other half of the shilling.

The next two, who chuck up refreshment tables were brought, and we all played cribbage, sixpence a game. The English never play any game for amusement. If they can't make something or lose something—they don't care which—they won't play.

The Origin of the Umbrella.
Our name for the umbrella, being obviously taken from the Italian umbello, naturally refers to Italy as the source from which we have derived that useful article. If we had obtained it immediately from France, we would doubtless have taken with it the name of parapluie, which in the present use of the implement is a more expressive and proper name than that of umbrella, which signifies a "little shade" and refers to the original use as a defense against the sun rather than to its present use as a shelter from the rain.

There is no doubt that the umbrella was first introduced into Italy from the east, and from thence found its way into Europe.
It seems almost incredible that the instrument as a defense from rain was quite an afterthought and that it was originally, as in the east, only used to protect the person from the rays of the sun.—Pearson's Weekly.

Originality to Love.
She was romantic and vowed to give her hand and heart to none but the man who should propose in an original manner.

Years passed, and hundreds—for she was a beauty and an heiress—essayed in vain with all manner of proposals to win her.

At last came a manly man, who said simply: "Will you be my wife?
You are my first and only love!"

With eager eyes she looked at him, but as he finished he burst into tears. "Your beginning was entirely original," she sobbed, "but the last sentence has been repeated to me by 41,144 different men and spoils it all!"

She died immediately afterward from a broken heart, and the manly man purchased a lonely island where he conserved himself to indulge in reflection.—Chicago News.

An Actor's Mistake.
A celebrated French actor came over to England. He had studied our language carefully. His friends were a little anxious about his powers of acquiring our difficult pronunciation, but he said he felt confident that well made up and by daylight his accent would pass muster. But, alas! he was overhauled. The crucial evening arrived and he was waiting at the moment of the dramatic display to exclaim in broken voiced despair: "I shall die! I shall die! There is peace in the grave." But his histrionic powers carried him away, and he forgot his carefully prepared pronunciation, and in heartbroken tones he sobbed forth: "I shall die! I shall die! There is peace in the grave!"
And then he could not understand why all the theater shouted with laughter.—Lady's Pictorial.

Language.
It is estimated that since the building of the famous tower of Babel there have been 1,500 distinct languages and 2,500 colloquies, or 5,000 different forms of speech. At the

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

For Railroad Commissioner.
We are authorized to announce John C. Wood as a candidate for Railroad Commissioner, for the Eastern District of Kentucky, subject to the action of the Republican party.

The Messenger's Unwise Tirade.

The Morgan Messenger, published at West Liberty, near the home of Thomas Blair, was unwise and misguided enough to deliver itself of the following: (The italics are ours.)

"News has just reached us that Thomas Blair, our countryman, was recently incarcerated in the Montgomery county jail for shooting at his cousin Dick Day without wounding him, and while in jail awaiting the action of the law, some of Mt. Sterling's citizens who are cowardly outlaws and unpunished debased fiends, without any noisy protest from the jailer, took Blair from the jail and murdered him by hanging him. Such conduct is a sad commentary on the civilization of the citizenship of Montgomery county. Such people who would either perpetrate or wink at such an abominable deed, have no regard for either human or divine law, and are utterly oblivious to the existence of human rights.

"This is not the first mountain man that a Montgomery mob has murdered, and we have no reason, judging from their state of feeling toward us and their past conduct, that it will be the last. We warn Morgans men to steer clear of Mt. Sterling if they are likely to take a drink or commit a trivial offense that will give the leeches of the law there an excuse to take them into custody; and in fact, we do not believe the most devout Morgan man is safe in the town; such is the hatred of a portion of her citizens for our people in general. Our people have extensively patronized Mt. Sterling's banks and merchants, and many of our friends are employed by it, and we should boycott it, where public sentiment has not reached that high standard in it, that will guarantee, to even a Morgan citizen a fair and impartial trial under the forms of law for any breach of our statutes.

"If the good people of Montgomery, and there are many of them, fail to ferret out the perpetrators of this heinous crime, and punish them according to law, the good and bad people of Morgan will to every way hold their responsible for their failure to eradicate the taint of their own good name.

"We do not claim that Tom Blair was free from shortcomings, but we do know that he was a brave, honest man, and as true a friend as ever wore a hat. He was made of such material that he would not be a party to such a distasteful murder as the sneaking cowardly scoundrels were guilty of when they hung him. Tom Blair left a host of friends in Morgan who mourn his untimely taking off, and the foulness of it, and who are more than likely to avenge his murder. We say let no guilty man escape."

We do not believe that the Messenger reflects the sentiments of the people of Morgan county in the above article. We are extensively acquainted among Morgan's best men and we have certainly misjudged them if they endorse such incendiary sentiments as are implied and expressed in the above article. We know Editor Araway and cannot understand how he could have allowed such an article to creep into his columns.

Has the Messenger ever stopped to think how many mountain men (even Morgan county mountain men) are now, and have recently been, holding positions of trust and profit in Montgomery county? Will he stop and count how many citizens of Montgomery county are either natives of Morgan or are near of kin to many in that county. Possibly the bitter hatred the Messenger speaks of will vanish into thin smoke if he will stop for a moment to think on these and some other things we might mention did space allow.

Brother of the Messenger, we will leave to you to say if the sentiments expressed in your article are not akin to those which actuated the cowardly scoundrels in their fiendish murder of Blair. If the sentiments you express are not dangerous, then we greatly mistake the import of your language. Repudiate them at once they are unworthy of you. You may be indignant, angry and resentful as you please over this crime, but for all that it cannot come home to you with a tithe of the severity and deep import with which it appeals to all right thinking people of Montgomery. It tells us in language you may not know or appreciate, how fearful a necessity exists for the exercise of all the machinery of the law in order to suppress the dangerous class who have grown so bold in our midst.

If God be God. Serve Him--If Baal be God, Serve Him.

The brutal hanging of Thos. Blair by a mob at this place on Tuesday morning last, has been the subject of much bitter denunciation from far and near. The contempt for law and order exhibited by those engaged in the crime of lynching Blair is bearing some of the fruit that such conduct always breeds. It is not an easy thing to sit still and have heaped upon to the contempt and bitter railing that is being visited upon us because of the frequent exhibitions of the mob spirit to be seen in our midst. But so deplorably true are the contemptuous things being said of us that we are for the most part dumb with shame. Such things as the action of Tuesday's mob are absolutely without their defense, and we can do little more than sit by and let out-siders say of us what they will.

In the meantime one resource is certainly sure, we can assuredly go about purifying our moral atmosphere. It is certainly possible for the law-loving and law-abiding element in this community to take matters into its own hands, and see that our courts are aided in enforcing the laws and exacting the necessary penalties for the commission of crime. Is it not in order to organize a Law and Order League and calling on the best and truest among our people to see that all the necessary backing is given our courts officials in their efforts to ferret out this and other dark and damnable crimes said to have been perpetrated in our midst?

The organization of a Law and Order League composed of one hundred or more of our best and truest men can render such efficient aid to our courts by helping them secure the needed testimony against the infractors of law that there will be a speedy hiding away of the lawless element. The only hope we have for peace and safety is to be found within the pale of our courts of justice. But these are virtually powerless unless backed by a healthy public sentiment. If we fail to give them this backing we will live to rue it.

In how many instances can it be shown that a mob is made up of good men? Is it not rather the case that almost without exception it is made up from the lawless element, with now and then a few good men drawn in to it, under one pretext or another, for the sole purpose of giving countenance to the disreputable gang that are in the foreground? If a crime is committed so heinous that the existing law cannot reach it and the better element of the community rise in their wrath and determine to wreak vengeance upon the perpetrator, it is not found that these men seek the cover of a mask and the blackness of night, but in the broad light of day with their faces bared to all the world, they go about their work. This, God knows, is bad enough; such a one as we had the other night is too unutterably vile to give it expression in words.

The Republican caucus has nominated Congressman Julius Caesar Burrows for Senator from Michigan. Senator Frye has been renominated by the Republicans of the Maine Legislature.

The Carillo Currency Bill, it is now believed, will pass the House only by a small margin, if at all and Secretary Carlisle is said to be discouraged over the outlook.

THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO. CINTL.

An Upright Judge.

More than eight years ago Judge Lewis Apperson assumed the duties of the office of County Judge of Montgomery county and yesterday he turned over to his successor, Judge Ed C. O'Leary, that office with its responsibilities. In those eight years the interests of the county have been most faithfully subserved, so far as they fell in line with the duties of the County Judge. When upon the bench he has known neither friend nor foe, but looking neither to the right hand nor to the left, he has spared not to do his whole duty as he saw it. No amount of threats, intimidations or persuasions could swerve him from the path he had marked out for himself. True to his conception of duty he spared not to the whole of it, let it hurt whom it might. He has the proud consciousness in laying down the office that he has for the past eight years so ably filled, that no man can point out where one dollar of the county's money has been misappropriated, but that he can show where time and again the expenses of the county have been curtailed and revenues that had been turned from their proper channel brought back again into those courses where they will pay the county's debts as it was intended they should do. He lays down the judicial ermine as stainless as when he received it. His hands are clean of any injustice done to those who submitted their interests to his adjudication. Like Israel's clean-handed judge of old, he can stand before the people this day and cry to them "Behold, here I am: witness against me before the Lord, and before us anointed: whose ox have I taken? or whose ass have I taken? or whom have I defrauded? whom have I oppressed? or of whose hands have I received any bribe to blind mine eyes therewith?" A truthful answer must be the same the judge in that elder day received: "Thou hast not defrauded us, nor oppressed us, neither has thou taken ought of any man's hand."

"Winter and Summer" were never more charmingly pictured than they are this season on Hood's Sarsaparilla Calendar. This calendar is made in the shape of a heart and is ornamented with two child faces, lithographed in bright and natural colors, one peeping out, amid the snow flakes, from a dainty cap, and the other lighted up with all the glory of the summer sunshine. The usual information about the lunar changes and other astronomical events are given, and the calendar, besides being "a thing of beauty," is also useful every day in the year. It may be obtained at the druggist's or if his supply is exhausted, six cents in stamps should be sent to C. I. Hood & Co., proprietors of Hood's Sarsaparilla, Lowell, Mass., who will forward a calendar free. For ten cents two calendars will be sent.

The Courier-Journal presents the usual dark chapter of crime following Saturday night and Sunday:

Near Falls City, Tex., three men were found dead on the roadside within a short distance of each other. From the nature of the wounds it was evident that all three were slain by the same person. Near Manor, Tex., two Mexicans were shot and killed. There was a woman in the case. Near Lytle, Ga., George Bellinger, colored, was killed by assassins. Near Edwards, Mass., a prosperous negro farmer and his wife were found near their cabin beaten to death. In Most, street, New York, "Lize, the man," a notorious character, threw a lighted lamp at another woman, who was burned to death. At Utica, N. Y., Mrs. William Flint shot and killed her husband and badly wounded his mother.

It is now Judge E. C. Orear. He took charge of the County Judge's office Monday, and we hope he will make an official second to none. He is thirty years of age, has had a large experience in legal matters and is full of energy. All citizens should encourage him in his efforts to protect and advance the interests of the county. He will occupy the County Judge's office in the Court-house, and Mr. Finley Fogg will be his clerk. The firm of Orear & Bigstaff will continue as it now is, except in cases where Mr. Orear's official duties conflict with the firm's duty to a client.

The Mayor and the Council are having a lively time over the pauper patronage and both sides of their story have been published as reading for the people. The Mayor and Councilmen are our representatives. We have elected them for that purpose and they should attend to our interests. If they cannot settle these things in the Council chamber, then let them get out of the way and we will elect some of our people who can. Heretofore business has been transacted quickly without squabbling, but once begun when will it end.

The first deed recorded by G. L. Kirkpatrick was a lot conveyed from J. M. Bigstaff to T. J. Bigstaff on the proposed extension of Sycamore street. It fronts on this street 165 feet. Mr. Bigstaff will erect a modern brick residence in the early spring.

On last Saturday Miss Sarah Lawler, aged 14 years, died of diphtheria at the residence of her parents on the Joe Johnson farm, near this city. She was an excellent girl, bright and buoyant with the hope of doing good in the world.

Mr. W. H. Bush bought two ear loads of hogs, weight 250 pounds, from parties in this county for which he paid 4 cents, for April delivery.

Mr. William O'Connell has resigned his position as book-keeper with L. F. Tabb, and has accepted a position with County Clerk G. L. Kirkpatrick for the present.

The Mt. Sterling Ice Factory has its office in the Commercial Club building, just opposite I. F. Tabb's office.

HORRORS OF MODERN WARFARE.

A German Invasion In The Interest of Humanity and Industry.

A young German has perfected an invention which, in behalf of all philanthropists, we hail with undisguised delight.

This is nothing less than an explosive calculated to mitigate the horrors of war and to lend to international conflicts an opera bouffe character, in pleasing contrast to the serious business hitherto connected with that method of settling differences of opinion. Our patriotic friend's explosive generates a powder, or a gas, or something or other, which will envelop the opposing armies in darkness and throw the soldiers into paroxysms of coughing and sneezing.

It will be seen at once, of course, that when two armies are engaged in sneezing their heads off, they can not successfully engage in long range firing. When the coughing spell is on them, a charge is out of the question. Generals and privates would be alike involved in one grand chorus of "hatchoo" and "hatchee," strict attention to which would make it impossible for them to engage in any other serious business. Only one who has ever had a first class cold in the head knows how completely the concomitant sneezing engrosses his attention.

Physicians say there are cases on record of persons sneezing themselves to death, but these are exceedingly rare, and consequently the list of casualties, in the event of the general adoption of the young German's novel warfare, would be reduced to a minimum.

There is, however, an economic consideration involved in this scheme that deserves a passing notice. Every quartermaster would be compelled to equip his armies with an unlimited supply of handkerchiefs, and for their manufacture innumerable looms would have to be started up.

Bring along that sneezing powder! It's a life preserver and will save the late industrial enterprise. — Washington News.

The Annotated Hunter.

If the preservation of court records intact should hereafter become a matter of importance to litigants, what disappointment and annoyance, not to say injustice, are in store for their posterity! Here and there the mutilation of such documents has been found out, but it may be believed that vastly more of it has not been. For instance, it is doubtful whether a single signature of Abraham Lincoln to a court paper can be found attached thereto. They have been cut out by curiosity hunters without compensation or regard for possible future complications.

I have it from the mouth of an ex-judge, who knew Lincoln, that this is true of several counties. An officer of the present government not long since boasted at an evening party that he had stolen such signatures by connivance with the custodian of the county papers. If similar plunder has been committed in other parts of the country, the records must be in a sorry plight. The descent from autograph stealing to the pilfering of whole papers is easy and suggests an ugly state of affairs. — Nation.

The Power of the Law.

Every criminal is an enemy of society. The aggression of crime constitutes a great army at war with society. It costs society—the good people of the country—an immense sum of money to pay the expenses against the foe. Under these circumstances it would seem that every law abiding citizen should always act as a private detective, extend his sympathies to the good rather than the bad and beware of doing anything to aid, comfort or encourage the enemy. The reason crime is as rampant as it is lies in the fact the crime does not understand how strong law is or might be. That is the lesson that ought to be taught—the overwhelming power of the law. If that were done, the innocent might sleep or walk the highways in peace and safety. Reprieves, pardons, remission of penalties, delays in the operation of law, are favors conferred on the enemy. It should be seriously considered whether society, in the present circumstances, is in a condition to grant any favors. — Kansas City Star.

Cooking by Steam.

Cooking dishes are now made in England in which, in the cooking process, the meat does not come in contact with the water or steam. The edible is contained in a jacket, which in turn is immersed in the outside kettle containing the boiling water. It is claimed that by this the nutritious qualities of meat are preserved, nothing passing off in vapor. There is moisture enough in the meat to prevent it burning, and all the flavor is retained, while, again, the fatter retains a tenderness not found in any other method. — Haniware.

She Knew Him Not.

"Oh, we had the loveliest marriage man at our church society, didn't we? Every woman contributed a subscription cause $1, which she herself by hard work."

"How did you get your money?"
"From my husband's salary."
"I shouldn't call that yourself by hard work."
"You don't know my husband's Snap Shots."

England's Patron Saint.

St. George, the patron saint of England, was born at Lyons, but brought up in Cappadocia. He was a tribune in the reign of Diocletian, and being a man of great courage was a favorite, but as he complained to the emperor of his severities toward the Christians and argued in their defense he was put in prison and beheaded April 23, 302. St. Jerome mentions him in one of his "Martyr-jogues," and in the following century there were many churches named to his honor. In regard to his connection with the patron saint of England, the "History of the Order of the Garter," says that King Arthur in the sixth century placed the picture of St. George on his banners, and Selden tells us he was patron saint of England in the sixteenth century.

It is quite certain that the council of Oxford in 1222 commanded his festival to be observed in England as a holiday of lesser rank, and in 1350 he was adopted as the patron of the Order of the Garter. The dragon slain by St. George is simply a common allusion to express the triumph of the Christian hero over evil, which John the Evangelist beheld under the image of the dragon. Gibbon, in his "Decline and Fall," asserts that the patron saint of England was George of Cappadocia, the turbulent Arian bishop of Alexandria, but the character of this assertion has been fully disproved by Papebroch, Milner and others. — Brooklyn Eagle.

Trousers In History.

Somewhat has discovered that even men's trousers have a history. Miss Celia Logan holds that the first developed successively into the bear-skin, tunic, tights, knee breeches and trousers. The truth probably is that trousers were first introduced as a brilliant discovery by some ancient. In fact, it is almost certain that trousers were first worn as a special form of costume by persons who rode horse-back. When they got off the horse, they resumed their flowing robes. It was soon found that trousers were better adapted than togas for quick movement of the legs, and when the barbarians overran Rome their legs were incased in trousers.

These conquerors by Roman artists of the conquerors in which there was probably no effort at flattery; the trousers are represented as most unbecomingly garments, being very wide about the knees and gathered at the ankles. The rest of their clothing was also ungainly and consisted of shirts, easy boots and perhaps a scanty drape on the shoulders. It is difficult to understand why such a hideous costume was worn. Even that of Robinson Crusoe, whose opportunities for making himself better were limited, was elegant in comparison. — Philadelphia Times.

Love In a Trolley Car.

A very handsome and stylishly dressed couple got on a car at North and Madison avenues and shortly by tender glances and their total indifference to surroundings that they had brought an immense amount of pent up affection along. At the corner the trolley slipped from the track and the car was in almost total darkness. The young man, who thought this was his opportunity, and expecting the usual delay in righting matters he leaned over and kissed the girl. Unfortunately for them the conductor quickly got the pole on the wire again, and ardent love was abashed by the laughing faces of half a dozen other passengers. The man jumped back as the car was again illuminated and once started for the door, but upon second thought resumed his seat. The girl looked as if she would like to sink through the floor. At the next corner both got off. — Baltimore American.

Franklin's Lightning Rod.

James T. Evidge of the Quaker City has been an indefatigable collector of relics of Philadelphia's early history, and his cabinets contain one of the most curious personal collections to be seen. He has a chip from the first millstone in the United States, used on Kitchen street, Wissahickon; a funny old lamp made in Germantown 100 years ago, resembling a combined teakettle and coal scuttle; a piece of Franklin's first lightning rod; shilling scrip printed in 1760 by Franklin and Hall on Rittenhouse's paper; a portion of the 1st fence still standing on the battlefield of Germantown, riddled by bullets; part of the elm tree that stood on the Chew estate; rusty cannon balls and bullets picked up there, and a host of similar interesting mementoes of the colonial and Revolutionary days. — Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

What She Wanted.

"I want a book," said a timid young woman to a public library attendant, "by that Norwegian or Swedish writer—I can't think of his name, but it sounds like Begabers-bejagers." After an instant's reflection the clever library attendant glanced among the alcoves and brought the timid young woman "Arne," by Bjorn stjerne Bjornson, and it was precisely what she had in her mind. — New York Herald.

A Definition.

Clergymen, assuming a Sunday school class, asked a question: "What is a will?" "A will," replied a small boy, "is a piece of paper, sir, they're always giving out." "Have you committed any sins?" asked the clerk.

THE DELINEATOR

For January, Which is Called the Holiday Number

Offers a table of contents that is extremely attractive and promises well for the New Year. The fashions are illustrated and described in the usual satisfactory manner, and there is a special article appropriate for the season on "Messes and Girls' Dresses." In the College Series a new departure is made, and the description of life at the Co-educational Institutions is begun, the first article being on Cornell, from the pen of Florence M. Hodder, '91. A very readable paper by Alice McKenna, "Treats of Women in Telephone Exchanges, and the Hygiene of the Eyes and Ears" is the subject of a fine contribution by A. B. Longstreet. A second installment of "Dressing Hints" appears in The Uses of Crepe and Tulle Papers, and "The Toilet of the Work" are shown some very pretty and original designs for photograph cases to be made at home. The spirit of the time is reflected in The Display of the Shops, and among the Holiday Books; and there is an exceedingly "Good-Night" Letter for Children. Seasonable Cooking is made so valuable to the housekeeper by attention of lists showing what to eat, how to serve Banquets, and a continuation of the articles on "Home." There are also Around a Tea-Table and Floral Work, and a Design in Knitting, Netting, and Crocheting, Lace Making, etc.

ENGLAND'S GREAT RECORD.

The Huge Volume Which Contains the Debates of Parliament.

Hansard, in 450 volumes, cannot be considered light reading, and the lovers of such will not thereby be attracted to the University of Pennsylvania, which has come into possession of the series. But the tomes contain the debates of the English parliament for a period of 825 years, going back to the time of its first origin, before the days of William Rufus and the wars of the roses. The historical student will not expect stenographic reports of the eloquence of those early times, for the art of verbatim reporting is quite modern, but something has been recovered which will pass for the official record, and the engulging Hansard embraces it all, presenting a continuity of parliamentary discussion before which even such robust masters of research as Gibbon, Carlyle and Albertus Magnus might turn aside in confusion and despair. It is only in recent years that parliamentary speeches have been reported with anything like accuracy. Up to the close of the last century they were written out from memory by the draughts and the holders of literature, sometimes men of genius, like old Sam Johnson, who reproduced the speeches of both sides, taking care that "the Whig dog should not be the best of it." The foregoing is the best of it. The short-handling of the discourse which he preserved. Short-handling came in with the beginning of the present century, but was not immediately perfected, and its early parliamentary and other records have a good deal of guesswork and conjectural interpolation in them, not always to the impairment of the original fabric. But for a long time the reports of parliament, like those of our own legislative chambers, have been of great accuracy, and they constitute a body of debate which in the importance of the subjects discussed and the lines of action radiating therefrom have never been equaled in the world.

The University of Pennsylvania is lucky in possessing so rare a treasure, exceeding in bulk the scrolls in which Manetho, priest of Sebenytus, preserved the memory of the Egyptian dynasties, besides being a good deal more interesting and important. Considering the mass of literature which these volumes contain, it is rather alarming to prefigure what our own congressional eloquence will amount to in printed bulk at the end of the ensuing eight centuries. The forecast is entirely overwhelming, but the result, though not to be precisely defined, is inevitable. The Crownwell arises to shake down our parliamentary fabric and blow it abroad upon the winds as dust and stubble and some Omar to burn up the congressional and other libraries. In default of some such measure of limitation congressional bibliography will run into proportions beside which the scribbled rags of Hansard will dwindle to naught and its expanding bulk constitute a menace to the stability of institutions which require such an amount of talk to keep them going.—New York Advertiser.

Blue Eyes Baleret.

Blue or light colored eyes are popularly supposed to most frequently carry the lethal influence, and to counteract this blue beads are sometimes worn. Cases are cited of men able to overthrow a carriage merely by looking at it, to wither up a bean-fodder, and so on. It is said that the belief in the evil eye among Christians, Jews and Mohammedans is stronger even than their religious beliefs.

The poets try to read good and bad luck from the color and growth of a horse's hair. This habit they seem to have got from the Bedouin Arabs, but are not so expert in the signs. A chestnut horse, for good luck, must have either both hind legs or else the near leg white. If only the off hind leg is white, that is bad luck. Then, by the way the hair grows on the neck, it is ascertained whether the owner will be killed by a spear or a dagger, and if a horse begins to dig with his feet that means that the owner is soon to be buried.—All the Year Round.

Tennyson and Wellington.

In Tennyson's ode on the death of the Duke of Wellington are the lines: "One of our heroes in our island story, The path of duty was the way to glory." The lines, thrice repeated, with slight variations, are a paraphrase of a remark of the Iron Duke which had deeply impressed the poet. Some one told Wellington that the word "glory" never occurred in his dispatches.

"If glory had been my object," he answered, "the doing my duty must have been the means."

A Letter of Pompeii.

On the skeleton of a lady who died at Pompeii were found two golden bracelets, six of silver, four golden anklets, four earrings, 50 finger rings, a golden collar, a golden belt and a golden hand on her head, while by her lay a purse containing 197 silver coins.

AN ATHLETIC LIFE.

Errors Committed With It and Disadvantages That Attend It.

There are disadvantages connected with athletic life which must not be concealed. There are errors abundant that need to be weeded out. There is an error in the commencement and the ending of the athletic life that should be remedied. It should not be begun at too youthful a period, it should not be continued to too late a period. I have put it at from 18 to 36 years of age, and that I am convinced is a very just limitation for all except those who are obliged to follow it, as in the acrobatic way, during a life of toil, devoted to the amusement of the people.

At 18 the organs of the body have fairly developed, and yet are not so matured as to have lost any degree of their elasticity, power and facility for affording graceful and powerful movements. The nervous system has become well developed, and the senses have reached to good and healthy action. At 36 the organs are matured to increase naturally, and all parts have entered into a maturity which stands in the way of a new activity of a permanent character. By the time the body begins to feel convulsions and vibrations which, excited, pass easily into shocks affecting the elastic substance, especially the elastic arteries and all structures that receive to be cushioned by the elastic element. If elastic tissue grows in the body in youth and adolescence, there comes a yearly period when it fails to grow, and, as occurs in a piece of india rubber, there comes another period when it begins to lose its elasticity. Then any new exercise of an extreme kind becomes a mechanical injury, which soon shows itself in the fact that the man once so successful is forced, no less volens, to admit that he is beat by younger competitors.—Sir W. Richardson in Longman's Magazine.

Cold Hell of the Scandinavians.

The Norseman's hell is as unlike the Presbyterian place of punishment as it is possible for one to imagine. This place of torment for the reprobate sons of the north is called Nastrond and is situated far toward the frigid north and is directly under Nifheim, the Scandinavian mythology's purgatory. A description of Nastrond as it appears in the "Prose Edda" (written in Iceland in the thirteenth century) is as follows: "In Nastrond there is a vast and dreadful structure with doors that face the north. This building is formed entirely of the backs and scales of serpents, writhed together like wicker work. But the heads of the serpents themselves are turned toward the inside of the shell, and they continually vomit forth floods of venom, in which must waste throughout eternity all those who commit murder or swear to lies." Another description of Nastrond is similar to this, but adds that the evil-doers are occasionally bitten by the great dragon Nidhogg.—St. Louis Republic.

Floating Cigarettes.

A prisoner lodged in one cell of a Chicago police station cannot easily secure the luxury of a cigarette from a fellow prisoner in another cell. Among the various schemes to which he has been known to resort the following is novel and amusing:

Along the walls of the station may be seen a water trough, in which a constant stream of water flows through the different cells. The prisoner eager for a smoke calls out to some fellow prisoner for a cigarette. How will it reach him! The stream of water flows from the cell of the latter to that of the former. From an envelope, or such paper as may be on the person of him who has the cigarettes, a little paper boat is improvised after the fashion of the small boy who plays in brooks and ponds. In this the cigarette is placed. The signal is given, and the boat with its precious cargo is sent down the stream to the other end of the line, where it meets with an enthusiastic reception.—Chicago Tribune.

Appropriate to the Occasion.

A collection was lifted in a Boston Sunday school for a foreign mission, and the people of one class were asked each to repeat a verse from the Bible appropriate to the occasion. The first boy said:

"It is more blessed to give than to receive."

"Good!" cried all.

And then they went on: "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord," and so on.

One boy staggered the teacher a bit by quoting: "The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak," but a certain amount of appropriateness was recognized.

"Give the devil his due," lengthened some faces when the next boy blurted it out, but the climax was reached, and the quotations ended when another boy shouted, "A fool and his money are soon parted."—Boston Traveller.

Not Interested.

First Citizen.—There is to be a big meeting tonight, a great outpouring of the masses to devise ways and means to reform the city government, so that its affairs may be administered with strict economy. Come along.

Second Citizen.—Um—Id rather not. Fact is, I am after an office my self.—New York Weekly.

Dr. G. C. Osason, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quick nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

The true gospel exposed.
Bridget hits her hand against the stove and cries out with pain. She applies Dr. Pease's Golden Relief and the pain is gone.
Johnny awoke in the night screaming for the pain in stomach the cherries had brought on. A teaspoonful of the Relief is given. Immediately Johnny is dreaming.
The sick mother, just returned from her Southern trip, is no better. The "thicket flush" is still on her cheek and gloom hangs over the family circle. The Golden Relief is used a month, and a cure results. The explanation is: Golden Relief cures indigestion. No inflammation, no sore from burn, no hurt from cherries, no consumption. Contains no opiates, narcotics or mineral poisons. Safe and certain. One tablespoonful cures La Grippe—it never deceives nor disappoints. Money refunded if satisfaction not given. Take a bottle home today.

Lou, dam of Axtell 2:12, by Mambrino Boy, will be used as a carriage horse in the future.

Whirligig, 2:10 the champion three-year-old pacer, has been consigned to the Buffalo sale.

At Los Angeles, Cal., last Wednesday, Aik trotted a mile in 2:04 and Directly paced in 2:08.

Joe Patchen, 2:04, has ten colts, five of which are trotters and five are pacers. In color they are black and bay.

Regal Wilkes, 2:11, will this year be bred to five daughters of Baron Wilkes, five daughters of Dictator and three daughters of Harold.

Electroner is the sire of one hundred and fifty-four trotters and one pacer with records better than 2:30, the averaged time for the lot being 2:18.

Robert J. did not meet with a single reverse last season, though he lost a few heats, it is now conceded that he might have won these had it been necessary.

Breeders sending their horses to public auction had better shoot than show them ragged and badly cared for. Send them in with a look as if somebody rubbed them.

All American trotters over three years old sent to France after January 1, 1895, will start as having a record of 2:25, whatever be the distance of the race. Those three years old or under will start as having a record of 2:34.

Boston has a grand aggregation of speed within her limits for either track or road. Among the trotters may be mentioned: Hazel Wilkes, 2:11; Arab, 2:15; Reina, 2:12; Thetis, 2:14; Pen H., 2:16; Aggie, 2:19; Wild Oats, 2:16; Mischief, 2:17; Caprice, 2:14; Argentine, 2:21; Lady Bug, 2:24; Maggie T., 2:18; Actress, 2:27; Tomah, 2:12; Yankee Luck, 2:19; Mary Carr, 2:22; Answer, 2:14; and Edenia, 2:14.

There is nothing so uncertain as a horse race. Ora Wilkes, Pixley, Di-rectum, Walter E. and Mary Marshall head the winning list for the campaign in 1893. In 1894, outside of Directum, they did not win their keep, and the "little black rascal" would have been in the same boat had he been out in anything but hip-polomeres. Ora Wilkes, however, must not be considered a back number, as he is far from it, and next year should be a good horse in his class.

California's sensational pacer of last year, Waldo J., has been sold by the Santa Paula Horse Company, of Santa Paula, Cal., to E. A. Hardin of the same city, and this year will be brought East. J. Mack, who developed him, will train him again this season. Waldo J. made his debut on the California turf last year as a four-year-old, and during his whole campaign he suffered but one defeat, and that at the hands of the great Silkwood, 2:07. In this race Waldo J. was timed in 2:09, and beat W. Wood, 2:07, for second money. Mack will also bring over several green horses. Among them a gray four-year-old by Bob Mason, dam by A. W. Richmond.

George W. Leavitt, of Boston, now in this city, whose business it is to keep posted in regard to the horse market, says the prospects are now brighter than they have been for years, and he now hopes to see the approach of the good old times. He has bought several first-class ones here within the past ten days, and in each instance he has paid a good price. Mr. Leavitt will remain in the city a while on the lookout for good ones. There are plenty of them here for sale, and the Boston gentleman will not doubt be supplied before he leaves. Mr. Leavitt is quite popular with our horsemen, who realize that in trading with him they will get a "fair deal."—Stock Farm.

A full attendance is requested at our hall K. of P., next Thursday evening. Officers to install and other important business.
